

All of our characters made choices that led to consequences.

Pick a character to explore within this Doodle.

What was the most challenging consequence for this character, and why?

The Doodle to use is:

Betty is Montag's boss at the fire department. He has a lot of knowledge about literature because he often quotes books, so he obviously has read some books. Even though he has read books he still burns other people's books. His choice to burn books even though he likes to read leads to his most challenging and final consequence, which is getting murdered by Montag. Montag probably killed Betty because he was going to have him arrested, but he might not have gone through with it if Betty hadn't taunted him. It almost seemed like Betty wanted to provoke Montag into killing him, so maybe the consequence of death was actually what he wanted.
